I figured that a ton of the small moves and trends are driven by human sentiment, some of it irrational, and some of it intended by the people setting up the game. And so with that I'd say that I expect to see further volatile periods of the kind that we have seen over the past 2 days. So, get back in the game. I've written this before and probably should have posted it a few days ago but I was confused that a lot of people were saying 2 years is the target. A lot of the market was still down from late 2015, and if anything I thought it was going to take a little longer to make a bottom. But I guess when your trading with a trend.
